Iconic

By J. Barbour

Zumthor's Thinking Architecture and Atmospheres are iconic additions to the lexicon of architectural theory. Zumthor is a humble giant, and his concern with the phenomenological experience of the user, as well as with the performative aspects of building, point the way to a twenty-first century architecture that is kinder and more responsible than the architectures of the twentieth. This is a must-read for all architects and designers, and if you find yourself thinking Zumthor to be ho-hum or you don't agree with him, I ask you: As an architect who do you serve? If your answer is one rooted in a wider ethic, Zumthor will resonate with you.

Thank you for the brief trip inside your mind

By Aware Architect

This book was a great read for those looking for inspiration in their architectural design approach. It is a quick read cover to cover, but I often refer back to it for its little subtleties. The main thing I gained from this gift, was an easy way to continue to develop myself as an architect. Writing about how we experience architecture helps us to think critically about it, and inspires us to continue our search for the essence of spaces. The more we can be aware in our observation and poetic in our expression, the greater the chance that others will experience what we love.
